Major League Baseball Spring Training Returns to the Sunshine State with 236-game Schedule

Tallahassee, Fla. – Today, Governor Rick Scott announced the return of Major League Baseball Spring Training to Florida. Over the course of 33 days in March and April a total of 236 Spring Training Baseball games will be played between Major League teams in 14 Florida locations, bringing fans from all over the United States to a tradition dating back to the late 1800s.

The 2012 Florida Spring Training season begins in mid-February with the arrival of pitchers and catchers from the 15 teams for pre-season workouts. Following two weeks of workouts, the first games will be played on Saturday, March 3.

In 10 of the last 12 seasons, the annual Major League Baseball Spring Training season has brought more than 1.5 million fans to Florida communities. A 2009 Economic Impact Survey of Spring Training Baseball, conducted by The Bonn Marketing Research Group Inc., showed a $753 million annual economic impact to the State of Florida.

“Every March, Florida welcomes Major League Baseball for its Spring Training season, as well as the fans and economic development it brings,” said Governor Rick Scott. “Currently, Florida hosts Major League Baseball teams from 11 different states and Canada, who come to enjoy Spring Training Baseball, our weather, our beaches and all of the other amenities our great state offers.”

Highlights of the 33 days of the 2012 Florida Spring Training Baseball season include:

The debut of the newest addition to the roster of spring training locations, JetBlue Park, the $78 million Fenway South complex in Fort Myers. The new ballpark seats more than 10,000 with an additional 1,000 spaces designated for standing room. There were 7,576 fixed seats at the Red Sox former home, City of Palms Park. The JetBlue Park playing field dimensions are identical to those in Fenway Park and the Park features a replica Green Monster in left field and a manual scoreboard.

The St. Louis Cardinals return to the field for the first time since celebrating their 2011 World Series Championship when they take the field against the Miami Marlins on Saturday, March 5. The Cardinals will be facing a fresh-look Marlins team with an updated logo and uniforms. The changes in name and branding are taking place as the Marlins move into a new stadium in Miami, on the site of the former Orange Bowl stadium.

Two teams with the longest continuous histories in a Florida community meet on March 9 when the Detroit Tigers host the Philadelphia Phillies at Joker Marchant Stadium in Lakeland. The Tigers have held their spring training in Lakeland for 76 years while the Phillies have been in Clearwater for spring training for 65 years.

For more information about the 2012 Florida Spring Training season, please visit the newly-redesigned www.floridagrapefruitleague.com. The site, maintained by Florida Sports, a division of Enterprise Florida Inc., has current information about the 15 teams holding their spring training in the State of Florida. Each team page includes a 2012 schedule, ticket information, stadium information and directions, host community information and a history of the team's spring training sites over the years. Fans can also order a complimentary copy of the 2012 Florida Spring Training Guide at the site. The annual guide will be available in late-January and includes schedules for all 15 teams and ticket information.
